TEMPERANCE PLAY PLANNED

The chapter is to be called to the aid of the Anti-Saloon League, which held its annual meeting yesterday in the Y. M. C. A. Mrs. Benson and Akas are planning to produce a play called "Vanguard" that comes from New Zealand and is supposed to be a very strong one. The matter was brought up by Mr. Pate, the League officer.

Practically everyone who sells liquor came to the meeting at the Y. M. C. A. yesterday. Formerly it was only the saloon but now the wholesale business have been attacked as well as the Army canteens and private clubs. They stated that a soldier had told him that with only a few exceptions every officer in the army drank and that this encouraged the men.

Clubs and lodges at Hills came in for sharp criticism at the hand of the League's officers and it was stated that many of the members of these clubs owed a good part of their salaries there.

Local Option Plans.

The League decided to adopt the local option plan as being the best way of securing results. It was stated that this would not mean that prohibition was to be lost sight of and that the League was in sympathy with any movement that could lead up to this. An attempt is also to be made to form good temperance lodges among the Hawaiians and the League is ready to finance the first one formed.

The League voted to pay half the cost of the eight drinking fountain that are to be placed around Honolulu in the Y. M. C. A. according to pay the other half.

The election of officers for the coming year resulted as follows: Rev. D. C. Peters, president; W. D. Westerselt, first vice president; Mrs. J. M. Whitney, second vice president; Lyle Dickey, secretary; W. H. Dickey, treasurer. The committees will be headed as follows: Theodore Richards, agitation; G. J. Walker, law and enforcement; Lyle Dickey, fund protection; Rev. Donning Scudder, legislation; W. D. Westerselt, finance.

DEATH AND LAW BRING UNHAPPINESS

The death of one of her four children, the youngest, a few weeks ago, was a terrible blow to Mercedes, the little Spanish widow in Palama, who had recently lost her husband. The settlement nurse watched the little woman struggle with her sorrow with great alacrity.

At this time they had on their hands a Russian baby, six months old, whose parents were at the time in the hospital. With rare tact one of the nurses carried the little Slav up to the cottage of the Spanish mother and placing the child in her arms asked her if she would keep it over night. The woman consented and the nurse left the baby in her care. The following morning Mercedes begged the nurse to let her keep the child until the parents were discharged from the hospital. In some fashion the baby succeeded to still the ache of her loss. Since then she has mothered her foster child, she has cared for it as she cared for her own, and has learned to love the little stranger as her own.

And now has come her second deprivation, for the real mother and father of the baby, who have a claim upon it which even Mercedes can recognize, have come back and claimed him and all the sorrow which Mercedes had tried to forget in her love for the foster baby has descended upon her with redoubled intensity.
